

Community Advisory Group
Informational Session
Jan. 30
for the
Fridley Superfund Sites
Fridley, Minnesota

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will sponsor two informational sessions to discuss the formation of a Community Advisory Group or CAG to advise environmental regulators on the Fridley-area cleanup sites. CAGs give interested people an opportunity to participate in EPA's Superfund process to clean up hazardous waste areas. At these upcoming sessions, EPA staff will provide information on how to form a CAG and choose its members. CAG membership is voluntary and participants should be willing to serve two-year terms. CAGs meet regularly to review site information and relay community views and concerns to the EPA. All CAG meetings are open to the public, and public input is encouraged.
